Dear Retailers,

On August 18th, 2008 Congress enacted the Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act of 2008 (CPSIA). This act requires a reduction in the amount of lead and phthalates in products, third party testing and certification, mandatory product and advertising labeling, and additional consumer safety regulations. At Out of the Box Publishing, safety is our number one priority. We strive to always exceed the required levels of safety.

As part of our ongoing commitment to toy safety, we have had all Out of the Box games tested for lead and phthalate content. The tests indicate that each of our games meet or exceed the safety standards established by the CPSIA. None have tested above the allowable levels for either substance. Beginning in mid-December, you will see a website address printed on the cases of games that you receive from us. That website will allow you to view all of our product conformity certificates.

Starting on December 12, 2008, all retailers are required to put warning labels on any website from which consumers can directly purchase toys and games that have choking hazard labels. Beginning on February 10, 2009, retailers are required to put the same warning labels on any printed catalogs or advertising from which direct sales may be made. While none of our games are geared toward children aged 3–6 years, several of our games do contain small parts. To ensure the highest levels of safety and compliance with CPSIA, we are requesting all retailers who sell our games to place the hazard labels on any websites or printed materials from which customers can directly purchase any of our games that contain small parts. Please refer to the attached guide for direction as to which games should be labeled and how they should be labeled. In general, all warnings should be: (1) prominently displayed; (2) easily visible in contrasting color; (3) printed in the English language; and (4) sized similarly to other typography in the advertisement or website. For more guidance on the new labeling requirements, please see the Consumer Product Safety Commission's website (<http://www.cpsc.gov/about/cpsia/cpsia.html>) and consult with your advisors.

Please contact us if you have any questions regarding our compliance with the CPSIA. We appreciate your continued support of Out of the Box Publishing and look forward to a safe and happy holiday!
